

Brand Naming Report

Name candidates screened for meaning and fit across six languages.

Brief (fictional)

A small wellness-tech startup needs a brand name for a habit-tracking app launching in Europe and Latin America. The name should feel calm and trustworthy, be easy to pronounce in English, Spanish, French, German, Portuguese and Italian, and carry no negative meaning in those markets.

Method

- Generate candidates from the brand’s core ideas: calm, clarity, growth, daily rhythm.
- Screen each name for meaning, tone and pronunciation across the six core languages.
- Flag false friends, awkward sounds and existing strong associations.
- Give each candidate a clear verdict: safe, caution or reject.
- Note domain/handle availability as a practical next step (illustrative here).

Candidate screening

Candidate	Concept	Languages checked	Verdict
Lumina	Light, clarity, guidance	EN ES FR DE IT PT	Safe — clean, easy to say everywhere
Verda	Green, growth, freshness	EN ES DE PT IT	Safe — close to “verde”, on-brand
Kairo	The right moment (Gk. kairós)	EN ES FR DE IT	Safe — short, global, memorable
Nuvo	New, modern	EN ES FR IT	Caution — common stem; check trademark/domain
Soma	Body, wholeness	EN ES PT DE	Reject — drug reference in English; flagged

Cross-language pronunciation & meaning notes

Language	“Lumina” reads as	Note
English	LOO-mi-na	Evokes “luminous”; positive.
Español	LU-mi-na	Clear; suggests “luz”, light.
Français	lu-mi-NA	Soft, elegant; no negative sense.
Deutsch	LU-mi-na	Neutral-positive; easy to pronounce.
Português	LU-mi-na	Suggests “luz”; warm.

Italiano	LU-mi-na	Close to “lumina/luminosa”; very natural.

Recommendation

Primary recommendation: Lumina, with Kairo as a strong alternative. Both are short, pronounceable across all six markets and free of negative associations in this review. Trademark and domain clearance should be confirmed by the client before adoption.
