01. Project Brief

Client Context

MindAtlas is a fictional privacy-conscious learning companion designed for university students. The product combines study planning, note organization and self-regulated learning prompts without making clinical claims.

Localization Challenge

The English source text uses calm, direct and trust-oriented copy. Target-language versions must preserve clarity, avoid overpromising mental-health outcomes and adapt call-to-action wording to natural local usage.

Portfolio Purpose

This document demonstrates how Scriptorium handles multilingual product copy, UI microcopy, privacy-sensitive wording, terminology consistency and scripts with different layout requirements.

02. English Source Copy

Landing Page Copy - Source Text

Hero headline: A private guide for clearer study.
Subheadline: MindAtlas helps university students turn complex notes into learning routines, focused sessions and realistic review plans.
Primary CTA: Create my first plan
Secondary CTA: See how it works

Onboarding Flow - Source Text

Screen 1: Choose your study goal.
Screen 2: Add the notes you want to organize.
Screen 3: Select your available study time.
Screen 4: Review your first weekly plan.

Privacy and Safety Microcopy - Source Text

Your notes are processed privately. The app does not provide clinical diagnosis or replace professional care.
You can delete your study history at any time.
If you feel unsafe or at immediate risk, contact local emergency services.

03. Localization Strategy

Tone	Register	Risk control
Professional, warm and concise. Avoids exaggerated wellness promises.	Neutral academic-commercial register; accessible to students and institutions.	No diagnosis, therapy or treatment claim. Privacy wording remains explicit.

04. 12-Language Localization Showcase

Each language block below translates the same controlled source fields. The objective is not literal symmetry, but functional equivalence: the translated copy should sound natural, preserve privacy constraints and remain suitable for a digital product interface.

07. Quality Assurance Checklist

✓ Terminology consistency

Controlled terms are repeated across UI strings and explanatory copy.

✓ Length sensitivity

CTA and microcopy were adapted for interface constraints rather than translated word-for-word.

✓ Privacy-sensitive wording

All target languages preserve the non-diagnostic and non-clinical disclaimer.

✓ Script handling

CJK and RTL languages were formatted with appropriate font support and alignment consideration.

✓ Brand voice

Copy remains calm, academic, practical and trust-oriented across all targets.
